

109 Wylie Hall
Indiana University
Bloomington, Indiana

Nov. 28, 1953

Dr. J. Lederberg
Department of Genetics
College of Agriculture
University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wisconsin

Dear Dr. Lederberg,

I am very glad to inform you that I have settled in Bloomington, Indiana, where is not so far from your Madison.

On my way to this Bloomington, I called on Dr. O. Hayaishi, Department of Microbiology, Washington University, St. Louis. It was very ~~much~~ delightful to me to see him after about 4 years' interval. When I met him there, he told me that you had spoken of me at Berkeley, Calif. Further he let me know that you had been crowned by a prize for your brilliant works in the field of microbial genetics. With all my heart, I should like to congratulate your success in this scope of genetics.

Some day in future, I should like to visit your Madison to see you. Now, I am setting about a new work: by a strain of Trypanosoma gambiense showing kinetosomes as you suggested, however, <sup>all</sup> my works are concerning to the antigenic variations in this species of Trypanosoma.

Very sincerely yours

Shozo Itoh

visiting Professor

P. S.

It was very regrettable that I could not visit you on my way to Bloomington from San Francisco.